

3.3.3 - Does your university as a body share sports facilities with the local community, for instance with local schools or with the general public?

Since it established in 2004, Al-Imam Ja'afar Al-Sadiq University has offered local community citizens access to shared sports facilities in an effort to promote the environment of legal recreational sports and the standard of sports administration and instruction. We share resources from the community to advance national fitness, widen students' perspectives, and enhance personality development. The sporting facilities are offered by Al-Imam Ja'afar Al-Sadiq University, include outdoor services, such as soccer fields, are provided free of charge by faculty, students and the community for exercise every morning and evening. Internal services, such as table tennis, are made available to faculty and students and to external citizens of the community to use free of charge. During the holidays, we loan the stadiums to communities or groups for sports competitions.
